SINISO BY MM

Stone, true to the core.

Sixty-three colours, selected for Indonesia from the 2026 SINISO range.

SINISO is sintered stone: natural minerals pressed and fired at around 1,200 °C into large, dense slabs. Each one carries the character of marble, onyx, limestone or travertine in a generous 1600 × 3200 mm format, at 12 mm.

This book gathers the sixty-three colours MM Galleri has chosen for the Indonesian market, in four collections: Full Body, Speckled Body, Coloured Body and Onyx.

MM Galleri has worked with natural stone since 1992. From Surabaya, with showrooms in Jakarta, Bali and Singapore, we hold the selection, the samples and the technical support behind every slab on these pages.

“Most sintered stone begins with a press. Ours begins with a handful of earth.”

Before there was a SINISO slab, there was a question about minerals: which clays, which feldspars, which proportions make a body that is dense, pure and true. The machines came later, built around the answer.

This book tells that story in four short parts, then lays out the sixty-three colours selected for Indonesia.

The Mineral

It begins with the mineral, not the machine.

SINISO is the high-end sintered stone brand of New Jincheng Group, which counts itself among the Top 10 ceramic groups in the world.

Unlike companies that began by buying a press, New Jincheng began with the raw material. A background in ceramics taught the group that a slab can only be as good as the earth it is made from: the purity of the clay, the balance of feldspar and quartz, the way each mineral behaves in the kiln.

So the order was reversed. First the minerals were sourced and refined; then the production lines were built around them. In 2020 that knowledge became SINISO, made in Foshan, Guangdong, the heart of the world's ceramic industry.

II

The Fire

1,200 °C

The minerals are pressed into slabs of 1600 × 3200 mm on a 40,000-ton SACMI continuous roller press, with vacuum pressure treatment, then fired at around 1,200 °C.

In the kiln the particles fuse. What leaves is a single, dense mineral body, 12 mm through.

Fire is also where the right recipe pays off. With the right minerals, the body comes out of the kiln pure enough to let light in, and strong enough to carry its pattern all the way through.

III

The Light

Light, held in stone.

Most translucent sintered stones must be cut down to 3–6 mm before light passes through. SINISO reaches semi-translucency at a full 12 mm.

The secret is the body: a very pure, 82° whiteness mix that lets light travel into the slab and gives the surface the soft depth of jade and onyx.

Found in the Full Body collection: Pure White, Pacetown, Vika, Ballop, Bvlgari, Banluo and Rapace; and in the Onyx collection: Crystal Rosa and Onyx Avorio.

IV

Three Bodies

What is inside the slab decides how its edge will look.

Every SINISO colour is made on a body: the stone you see when the slab is cut, at an island edge, a sink cut-out or a chipped corner. This book is arranged by body, in three body collections plus a separate Onyx collection, and each colour page names its factory body.

Full Body

COLOUR AND VEINING THROUGH THE SLAB

Colour and veining run from the face to the back. Cut, mitre or round the edge and the stone carries on; on the translucent full bodies light passes into the slab at its full 12 mm.

18 COLOURS

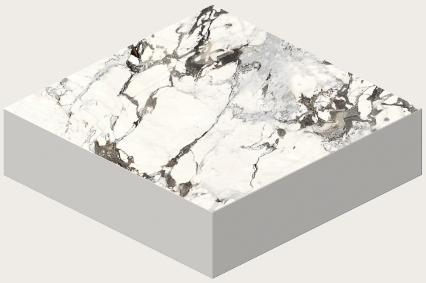

Speckled Body

A TINTED BODY THAT HIDES THE EDGE

The body is coloured and lightly speckled to follow the surface tone: beige, grey or black. Edges and chips stay discreet, for hard-working floors, worktops and walls.

11 COLOURS

Coloured Body

A BODY CHOSEN FOR THE SURFACE

Super-white and beige bodies. The white bodies give the brightest whites and clearest glazes behind marble, limestone and travertino designs.

Full Body

FULL VEIN Colour and veining run from the face to the back. Cut, mitre or round the edge and the stone carries on. Translucent, white, black and green full-body colours, marked with the Full Vein tag.

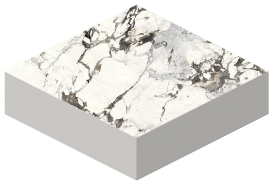

Speckled Body

The body is coloured and lightly speckled to follow the surface tone: beige, grey or black. Edges and chips stay discreet, for hard-working floors, worktops and walls.

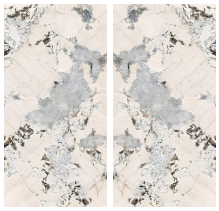

White Body

A clean, super-white body behind the surface gives the brightest whites and the clearest crystal glazes. Edges are finished, mitred or polished to suit the design.

Book Match

BOOK MATCH Two consecutive slabs mirror each other, opening into one symmetrical composition. Supplied as a numbered pair (-1 · -2).

One Face

A single slab design. Consecutive slabs vary naturally, as in quarried stone.

Item No. · On request

The SINISO factory reference. Quote it, with the finish, on every order. New 2026 colours marked “On request” receive their number with the first order.

Full Body

The veining runs right through the slab.

The hero pieces of the range. Colour and pattern carry from face to edge, so mitred islands, waterfall ends and cut-outs read as one block of stone. Translucent full bodies let light into the slab; super-white, green and super-black full bodies follow the surface design.
